

23rd March 2020

Dear Children,

I hope this letter finds you well at the end of your first day at home. If you have been to school today, I expect you found it quite strange!

There's no doubt that you will be missing your friends, but the government has chosen to do this so that we can all stay as safe as possible. It's going to be very difficult for a while but things will get better...it'll just take time. Your parents may encourage you to keep in touch through social media - what a turn-around!

Getting used to being taught by your parents or others who care for you will, of course be challenging. You will get on each other's nerves and there may be times when you argue, shout and have strops! Please remember though that your parents love you and are trying their best to do what's right for you. There will undoubtedly be some tears along the way, but I'm sure there'll be plenty of laughter too.

Your teachers and those who support you send their love and best wishes too. We'll get through this; try not to worry too much – we're all in this together.

So, keep safe and love one another.
